

Case Study: Contract Manufacturing X-Ray ID Camera

A Fortune 500 global imaging company was producing a x-ray ID camera at the legacy stage of the product life cycle. Due to increased competition in the market regarding both cost and emerging technology, the customer required a competitive solution to free up internal resources. PEKO provided that partnership adopting full service contract manufacturing with continuity of supply (transition planning) while addressing obsolescence and productivity demands through solid engineering support for several years.

